YOUR WEEKLY WASHINGTON REPORT

The Declaration of Independence begins: "When in the course of Human Events . . ."

In reporting the news, Human Events is objective; it aims for accurate presentation of the facts. But it is not impartial. It looks at events through eyes that are biased in favor of limited constitutional government, local self-government, private enterprise and individual freedom. These principles represented the bias of the Founding Fathers. We think the same bias will preserve freedom in America.

● Sterling Tucker, national coordinator of the Poor People's "Solidarity Day" march last week, proclaimed it was going to be difficult for the poor to remain loyal to the United States unless they receive better treatment. "We want to remain loyal," he stated, "but it will be hard to remain loyal if we continue to suffer at the hands of our countrymen."

● Two of the three national secretaries recently elected by the radical Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) have described themselves as "Communists," but say they aren't following any particular brand. When queried about her political leanings, Bernadine Dorn, who has worked with the National Lawyers Guild, a Communist front, stated: "I consider myself a revolutionary Communist." Michael Klonsky, another secretary, said he had been a "Communist" for only a few months, but denied that he was a "Stalinist."

● A reporter at the recent SDS meeting in East Lansing, Mich., said he was thwarted from getting into a special SDS workshop on the use of sabotage.

● Roy Wilkins has sharply criticized Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for barging into an NAACP awards dinner in Philadelphia last week. Wilkins, the NAACP's director and the featured speaker at the banquet, made his remarks after Rocky had left the building with Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania. "Those governors, as candidates for public office, had no business here tonight," said Wilkins. "You can't tell who I might vote for, but you can be sure he can't come in here and take advantage of a meeting of my organization."

● Officials of the Americans for Democratic Action have announced that they plan to produce a regular radio program called "An Appeal to Reason" to spread the liberal word throughout the nation.

● National Review will soon begin publishing a four-page newsletter called Combat, the major purpose of which will be to keep tabs on the Communist-oriented groups that are mushrooming around the country. The newsletter will be edited by Theodore Lit, a senior editor of the Conservative Book Club and former associate of Fulton Lewis Jr., and Mrs. R. Matthews, wife of the late J.B. Matthews, who has spent more than 15 years analyzing radical activities. Combat's editorial adviser is longtime Soviet expert Eugene Lyons.
